What happens at the Berkeley Psychic Institute?

from the Graduation Address given by Rev. Paul Siebert on his graduation from the year-long training program of the Berkeley Psychic Institute and the Church of Divine Man

In the year-long seminary training, I started to reintroduce me the being to my body to the point of being able to like myself and be aware that the imperfections I disliked so intensely in others were the same ones I refused to see in myself. I believed as truths other people's ideas and misinformation I had accepted at face value. Those people who could not fit into the categories I had set up were "pukes" and obviously in need of at least being told what I thought of them. One would have thought I had a chip on my shoulder.

I have come to know how to allow myself to be where I am and to allow each of you the freedom to be in the space you find yourselves. This doesn't mean that I have to love everyone - nor do I want to; I have no desire for that affliction to engulf my space. I can like or love someone and not have to change them. I have learned to idle my emotions, and look at many things that are happening to someone else in their space. Having had a similar experience, I can release the energy of that event or picture out of my space, thereby having more energy for myself in present time. The vehicle through which I am able to do this is called an Aura Reading. I am a Psychic Aura Reader. Should this person I am reading desire to release their stuck energy from whatever picture is holding them back, I have learned how to start the process for them to heal themselves. I am a Psychic Healer.

The tools I have been learning and practicing for the last year are available to anyone who has the havingness to obtain them. Through the Berkeley Psychic Institute training, I have gotten into kindergarten and relearned how to use those abilities which I had when I came into this body. I learned by watching and doing, as we have no books at the Institute, other than those beings that walk through the doors of the seminaries, desiring a reading and healing to improve their body/being communication.

Certainty arrives from validation. Having been validated that I could "see" clairvoyantly, I have gained a level of certainty where I do not have to prove my capabilities to anyone. I can see something happening in your space, but you have to want to do something about it. You see, it's really not my problem - I'm concerned with my own growth and abilities - you have to take care of yourself. I give you the freedom to be as you wish, and I give myself that same freedom. I allow myself to have, to know, to see, to be myself, to laugh at myself, and not cry for you. These abilities have re-kindled the flame of enthusiasm for life within me.

I find that amusement is more than laughter. It is a feeling that glows from within - the spirit, watching the antics of bodies and finding humor in what it sees.

Besides reading at least twice a week, attending the weekly lecture, and completing work hours, we take our skills to the public at various fairs and demonstrations, and for the privilege of being able to gain our own freedom, we pay tuition. The reality of a dollar and cents commitment is what kept me coming back through the doors when I couldn't stand myself, couldn't bear to look at another picture, and wanted only to run away and hide under a rock. I got a lot more than I bargained for.

Jesus said, "Anything I can do, you can do!" You too can create miracles. He also said, "Become as little children, know thyself, and be reborn again. Then shall you enter the Kingdom of Heaven."

I am as capable as Jesus. In this world full of bureaucracy and planning commissioners, I am ordained a minister, licensed to practice my faith with certainty in the face of contradiction.

May each of you find your permission to have from within.

Psychics and computers.

There is an ability we know about labeled Telekinesis with which people can turn off the TV, scramble a radio transmission, spin the hands of clocks and generally cause any machine to go haywire. Most telekinetics don't know what is happening to them when they are manifesting this psychic ability.

During an aura reading a clairvoyant can look at the energy of a person and tell if he has this ability turned on or off. Most people have very little telekinetic ability of the machine busting variety. Most manifest a small amount which may cause minor malfunction of electrical or electronic appliances. The famous psychic Uri Geller has used his telekinesis to stop and start watches and clocks and bend spoons.

The computer industry is very aware of this ability in humans. For less than $50 you can buy a "foolproof" wrist rest with a special grounding cord that eliminates static cling inside your computer. One advertisement quotes a Wall Street Journal report that you can unintentionally discharge 20,000 to 30,000 volts of electric energy into a computer. This is especially noteworthy when it only takes 10 to 15 volt jolts to damage some computer circuits.

Human beings are walking energy factories. An article in Computerworld describes the research of a Syracuse University professor who "found a link between a negative attitude toward computers and a higher frequency of crashes. It looks to us as though some people anomalously interact with equipment, in a way that produces frequent breakdowns," the researcher was quoted in the article.

Are you a computer jinx? If so, you may be labeled "malfunction-linked" by the psychologist researchers, who discovered that a computer crashed only with one of the malfunction-linked people.

However, there is a healthy amount of skepticism about people with psychic abilities making computers fail. The CIA, according to one magazine article, says it is foolish to be concerned whether or not someone can affect a computer. After all, they have developed little black boxes for that sole purpose. Despite the disclaimer, it is popular knowledge that government agencies spend upwards of 6 million dollars a year sticking pins in psychics trying to find out about telekinesis, among other psychic phenomena.

Other psychologists are examining people for "computer anxiety", tension, nervousness, sweaty palms, racing pulse, fears and failures and confusion. A study by the Catholic University of America used 150 subjects to discover that 50% of the public is afraid of a computer.

Some say the "negative attitude" causes crashes. A psychic may look at this problem and say, "He's sensitive to energy." This issue of This Is Your Psychic Life Magazine is about computers, energy and psychics. How does this new technology and the technology of the future affect sensitive people — healers, aura readers, clairvoyants, people who hear things? There is a race going on to implant the first bio-chip-miniscule computers in the bloodstream to monitor body chemistry and correct imbalances. How does the spirit interact with such a computer?

I'm amused. Here I sit at my home office Apple IIc silently typing away, no crashes, no energy glitches, then all of a sudden, as I turn on my dot matrix printer I get a shake, rattle and roll: a shimmering of a revolt that my editorial is being eaten by the printer. I ground myself as it goes on, scrambles lines one and two then prints my editorial and dutifully spits out exactly what I put in.

I just realized that I can ground, not be afraid of my computer and not let it control me.

Thank you so much for the validating information Psychic Life offers.

Thank-you, Patti Jo Roth

Trance Medium

I am writing in response to your invitation to write to Psychic Life Magazine and the issue on trance mediumship.

I am a trance medium. I am also a teacher in the Berkeley Psychic Institute of Santa Cruz. I have been in the Church of Divine Man since 1978 and was ordained in 1979. I have found experience to be the best teacher for a trance medium to understand herself, her body and how to control who occupies it. You can learn from your mistakes and supposed "bad" trance mediumship experiences. Nutrition, sleep, and fun help too. You have to play, discover what types of food help you to ground and be safe as a body. How much sleep and relaxation does your body require to be happy and not run into trance mediumship fits. I find, if I push my body without food, sleep or fun that I and my body can lapse into an out-of-control trance mediumship space. I have been reading auras in BPI for 7 years and have kicked a lot of beings out of my space. Recently I have come to realize a person must really want to change. No matter if I have the golden key, I have to want to end the out-of-control trance medium game.

When I was a clairvoyant student "trance mediumship" was a BAD word. I tried to be "good", but my teacher Rt. Rev. Dr. Lewis Bostwick and his wife Rt. Rev. Susan H. Bostwick knew how BAD I was. How they put up with me only the Supreme Being knows. I can hear him laughing now! (Now, Lewis has a trance medium training program within the church.) They were patient and guided me to run my energy and read, read, read those auras! They said this is how you find your freedom. It was true. Now, as I teach many sensitive people in Santa Cruz (and let me tell you there are a lot of trance medium here!) how to ground I, too, have patience. I, also, see I can not save all the trance mediums on the planet. Only those who want to and they must do it for themselves. As was told me in my first reading - in response to "how can I get rid of all these beings?" "A dog obeys it's master best - you must tell them to go; we can take them out of you but you have to discover your own certainty in order to own your body and kick them out." Good luck in your trance mediumshipship and thanks for the invitation to write.

Rev. Mary Gist.

Ask Sharon

by Sharon Santos

Dear Sharon

Thank you for your reply to my questions, but it was too long in coming. If you are interested to know about your accuracy, you are very accurate. "H", the man I wrote you about was indeed confused as you said. He was confused about his career, where he wanted to live and, he changed his mind about dozens of things all the time. He lost things too. These were not his only qualities, of course, but he was confused. The thought that he might have found another woman occured to me a few times. As you might say, "he chose to create a beautiful body this life time". The thought that he wouldn't be on the loose for long occurred to me. You confirmed this. Best Wishes.

Amy

Hello Amy

Thank you for the communication and the validation. I apologize for the tardiness of my response. This magazine also offers a service called "Psychic Hot Line" that can answer more urgent requests.

Sharon

Hello Sharon

I wrote you hoping to get some addresses of folks in Juneau, Alaska who are interested in communicating with other psychics in that area. I am leaving in June to spend the summer there in Juneau and since I don't know anyone there... it would be such a welcome to have someone to start off with some new friendships to build over the summer.

Carol

Dear Carol

I have been going through my files. A few years ago I received a letter from someone in Juneau asking the same question. Contact Rev. Laura Hopper, Psychic Horizons, (415) 387-8575, who has a psychic school going now in Homer, Alaska. Be sure to let me know your address in Juneau so that I can send you any replies to this letter.

You Do It Yourself

Getting Your Sleeve Out of the Machine

The first time I ever sat in front of a computer was in the Berkeley Psychic Institute of Marin with a friend of mine who was the Director. The computer operator was gone that day and we were like two little kids playing with the family car when Dad wasn't around. We were typing jokes into the computer and pushing buttons when suddenly all these flashing lights and patterns came onto the screen and the computer stopped working. Knowing that we had probably ruined the computer for ever, we turned it off, covered it up, and ran. A few weeks later when I began my training on the computer and I related this story to the teacher, his first question was -did you use your psychic tools to handle the energy of the computer? I realized that I had not done this and as I learned to ground myself and the computer, and use other psychic tools I had learned, I found I could easily learn to use computers.

I have heard many stories from psychics about computers. Stories of giving computers a "healing" after they broke down and they then started to work again. Yes, you can give a computer a healing. To do this all you do is ground the computer and the energy around it and move out any energy in the computer that stops it from working:

*Ground the computer = posulate a cord of energy from the computer to the center of the earth.

*Move out energy = postulate a valve opening in the grounding cord to drain off negative energy.

This works not only for computers, but for all machines. During a psychic reading I use a tape recorder to record the reading. Before each reading I test the tape recorder, but often during the reading the energy becomes so intense that I've seen tape recorders stop working, the volume of the voices go up and down, the playback of the tape be all static, or once even a Mexican radio station came through on the tape. One clairvoyant student of mine told me about her stepson who couldn't get a disc player to work. She looked at it clairvoyantly and saw that he was running his own energy through the machine. She grounded his energy out of the machine and told him that the machine wouldn't work on his energy level, only it's own. Her stepson pulled his energy back and the disc player began working.

What happens to you when you get around machines? Do you "own your space" or do you allow them to become senior to you? Often when I look clairvoyantly at a person and a machine I see that the energy around the machine is fine; the energy of the person using it is not.

What happens if you don't watch yourself and your energy around machines? For many years I ran a printing press and always made sure that I grounded myself and the press and used my psychic tools. One day I had my mind on other problems and the next thing I knew my sleeve was caught in the rollers of the press. Fortunately, I came back to reality in time to pull my sleeve out (covered with ink - of course) before my arm got caught.

If you're around a machine and it starts going wrong, step back, find amusement, and see who's running who. ☆

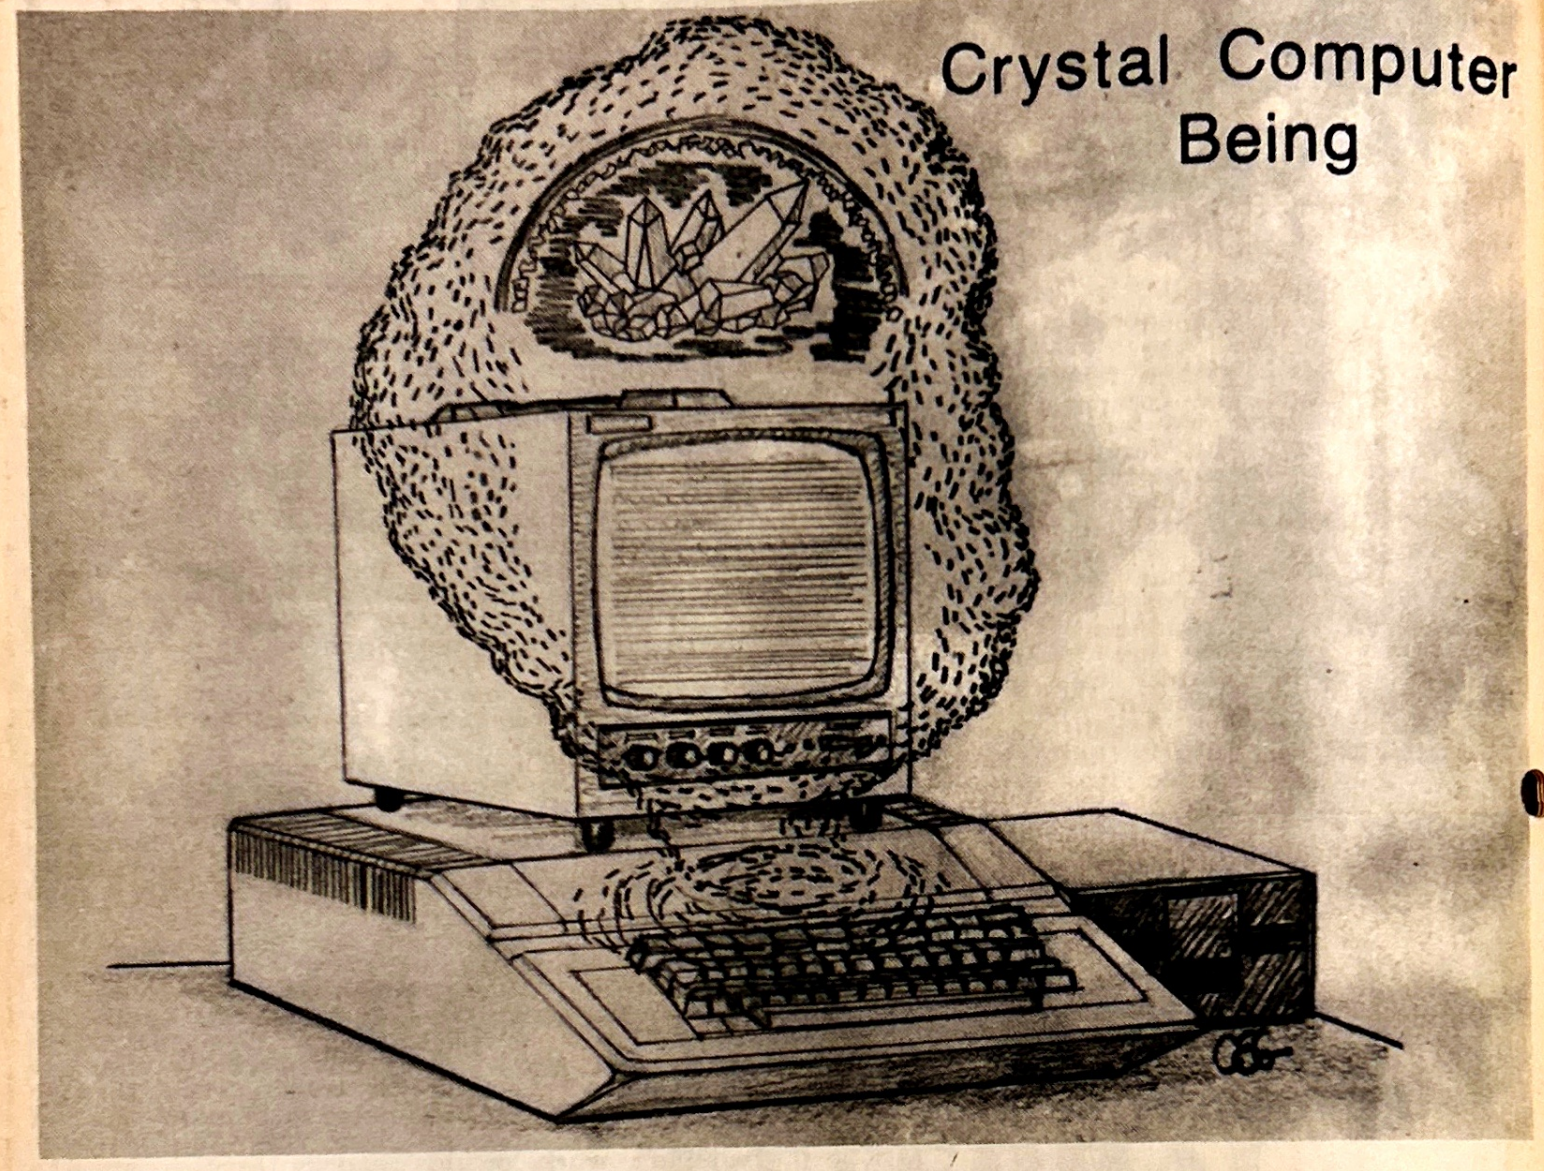
by Caitilin Goodsell



Hello! I am speaking to the being who lives above this computer. I see that you are vibrating at a soft silver color. You have a small amount of your energy inside the computer. This allows you to experience the flow of energies that are generated when the computer is being used. I see those energies as blue, gold, silver and white. As I enter this material I am composing, I see you bringing more of your energy into the monitor so you can have more of this communication. Hello!

I see that during your existence you have inhabited crystalline growths in the earth much as I live in my body. You enjoy the growth of crystals and like to help them grow in interesting patterns and beautiful colors. The structure and flow of energy within the silicon chips of a computer is related to the natural crystals in the earth, but is very different too. It is a big step for you to be learning about, and adjusting to, the very complex, fast-moving level of silicon.

You are very protective of the computer. This is partially why a new person has a hard time learning to use it. She has not yet learned how to say "Hello". Once she does, she is allowed to play. If she resists saying Hello to you, you climb into her head and she starts to make mistakes. Often she will then go into effort and put her energy into the computer. This can cause it to break down. However, if someone is friendly, you will be on her side. You are showing me clairvoyantly a time when an operator accidently kicked the outlet and lost power on this computer for several seconds. Contrary to expectations, she did not lose the information stored in the computer. I perceive that you used your energy to maintain the electrical charge within the chips so that the information would not be lost. This saved the operator from having to repeat two hours worth of typing. I'm sure if she had been aware of this she would have said "Thank you." So I will say it for her. Thank you!

Men Heal Each Other

Rev. Richard Lawrence has been teaching, reading and healing men in the Berkeley Psychic Institute (BPI) for more than three years. This year he will direct a Men's Healing Program that is a year-long training within the Seminary of the Church of Divine Man. He was asked by Psychic Life Magazine interviewer George Newton to discuss this new program which is open to all men seeking spiritual growth.

There are several parts of the Men's Program. The one year training is available after the completion of several years of clairvoyant training at BPI. Six-week classes in healing your male body will be offered to all men after they have taken at least one class at BPI: Meditation I or Healing I or Breaking the Ice. There are Workshops, Male readings, and weekend retreats open to anyone.

How are men programmed by their mothers? Does a man run his body energy like his mother runs hers? How does a man handle female creative energy? Men have no guilt, so when a man experiences a guilty conscience, which female is running guilt through him? These are the areas of lecture and psychic work we cover in a year-long program along with: healing other men, aura reading other men's male and female energy levels. The Program will participate in the Male/Female Communication class sponsored jointly with the Women's Healing Program. We will also offer workshops on specific topics such as, Creative Energy in Men, Men are Simple/Women are Complex, et al. that will include a series of readings for people in that particular workshop. The purpose of the Men's Program is to create a space where men can find their own answers and autonomy regarding their own bodies. Men have different answers than women to the same questions. We will be helping men to create a space of communications with their bodies and help them use their abilities. If a man wishes to work on these levels, he must first recognize himself as Spirit and work on his psychic abilities. Doing so, he then knows the basics and his answers do not become intellectual/psychic folderol. Men's values are separate and operate on a different energy level than women's. Recognition of Spirit is very important to a man who is working toward autonomy on his Spiritual path.

(Richard Lawrence and Carol Tracy are psychics and healers. They teach the Men's and Women's Healing Programs of the Berkeley Psychic Institute... editor)

A Woman at the Apple

Computers, obviously this word is synonymous with male, right? Are you amused that objects are often given gender (ships are always she). When you see this type of role casting can you remain neutral? Often identity of certain jobs or objects as male or female is a "button" that onesome can push to set you off. If you are sensitive to these designations you can begin to notice those things that may control you. If someone can insult you easily by saying computers are male and irons are female then they can get you out of neutral, a pretty good game. Hello!

This button pushing goes on all the time, sometimes playfully, sometimes not. If you cannot separate from these sensitive areas you can be had. Getting someone out of neutral and into anger, apathy, defensive, or prove it is the way this control can happen. Little children often push buttons on their parents to learn about responses; the old cause and effect game. Very often this is a great source of amusement to a child; say this and Mom goes through the ceiling and loses her space, and while she's there maybe I can program her to buy me some ice cream tomorrow. Pretty simple. Of course, none of us did this as children to our parents.

The other day I had an interesting experience with computers and the notion of gender. In our office I needed a project done on the computer. The usual computer workers were unavailable. Never being very business oriented myself I found the idea of computers very foreign and very male. A lot of women who had learned the computer had told me tales of feeling buzzy, headachy, and in body pain in their female reproductive area after working at the computer. This information did not give the computer a great amount of allure to me. But if I was to get this project done quickly it looked like I had to do it myself. I got a quick introduction to the computer from the Deja Vu Publishing Co. typesetter and went to work. Well, surprise, it was FUN and it was easy; I was having a great time. I couldn't understand what all the turmoil was about computers. I completed my project in about 2 hours. Of course, a male had to stop by and push my buttons about what was a female who directs others doing working on input at the computer... Good thing I was looking at just that concept that day.

About half an hour later, while sitting in a meeting, my two hours in the computer room caught up with me. My vision became blurred, my whole body started to shake and I felt awful. Fortunately, one of my coworkers whisked me off to a restaurant for some spicy Tai food and my body began to calm. What happened? I wondered. Maybe computers do work better for men. I had lost my amusement.

I discovered the next day that my experience is what happens when a healer sits down at a computer and doesn't protect herself. Any energy that has been dumped into the computer from previous workers and any problems trying to be solved get soaked up through the hands, and the female creative energy starts to work to set it right. If I didn't know some simple psychic tools to clean my space out I'm sure I could have felt not very well for quite some time, and definitely left with a false impression about computers and women.

Has anything like this ever happened to you? Women as nurturers tend to do this healing not only with computers but other machines as well. Men often have the ability to remain a little more separate from these pitfalls, enter again the fact that they don't have all the improving baby making machinery. If a man is working on something mechanical and it breaks he'll probably say "that machine messed up," if a woman works on the same machine and it breaks she'll probably say "I messed up." If you are female are you amused?

Women, however, don't have to be the effect of these buttons, or these situations. A few basic tools, amusement and remembering to use these skills, even in front of something as guileless as a computer, takes care of that energy.

If you would like some more communication on these 'buttons' I would be happy to see any of you in a Women's Healing Clinic, or to give you a professional Women's reading.

Professional/Home Astrology Programs
Affordable Horoscopes

If Ptolemy could only see astrology now! He would be astounded by the computers which manage the mathematics of astrology in the blink of an eye. He would envy modern astrologers who can calculate intricate celestial formula with the push of a few buttons. In Ptolemy's day, a lifetime was spent in learning the details, and the casting of a horoscope required days, sometimes years of research.

Computers and astrology have maintained a weird symbiotic relationship in this century. When IBM decided to introduce their first computerized calculators to the general public they programmed their machines to display the position of the moon at the moment of birth. They demonstrated the magic of their "giant brain" to the crowds of people who passed through Grand Central Station in New York City in the mid-1950's. From that day on, computers have been cranking out astrology charts and romantic predictions for millions of people daily.

By 1970, several major computer companies had designed simple chart calculation programs for use with their computers. IBM, Radio Shack and Texas Instruments were the first to sell consumer-accessible software to the astrology marketplace. Their programs are still available at a reasonable cost; but the programs are designed to work only on their hardware. These programs print simple chart calculations with very little flexibility but with amazing accuracy. They range in price from $15 to $65 and can be purchased at authorized dealerships.

Several enterprising astrologers recognized the exceptional value of software programs that could be used to delineate a broad variety of mathematical applications to the chart. Michael Erlewine and Robert Hand, in particular, saw the potential of astrological software and capitalize on it.

Michael Erlewine is the founder of and genius behind MATRIX SOFTWARE which is clearly recognized as the most innovative and aggressive company in the field of astrology software. Matrix Software has even extended its capacity to serve the astrology hobbyists, although their most amazing programs are strictly astrological. A complete catalog of all their programs is available by calling this toll-free number: 800-622-4070. The major distributor of Matrix Software on the West Coast is Time-Space Computing, P.O. Box 51325, Pacific Grove, CA 93950, (408) 375-8328; ask for Dick or Nancy Fadington. Matrix Software sells programs in the $30 to $150 price range. Astro-Talk is their beginners program which not only calculates charts but also teaches the novice the finer intricacies of aspects, house positions and transit activities.

Blue-Star is the intermediate program which delves into progressions, a variety of house systems, and all the zodiacal variations. But probably their most complete and professional program is called M65 which contains all the possible combinations of chart calculation and enough storage capacity to list and compare 1500 charts. All of the programs from Matrix Software have given the astrologer and the hobbyist unbelievable access to the mysteries of astrology.

Robert Hand, a former astro-physicist, is the creator of AGS Software which is based in Massachusetts. The first real interpretation programs were designed by Hand and his crew to give the general public a valid and useful

PREDICTIONS FOR 1986
Third World debtor countries will dramatically lower the prices of their goods. This will throw the futures market into turmoil and eventually upset international finance.
B) The health and banking industries are in for severe reforms. Several countries will attempt to nationalize both industries in an attempt to preserve their national security.
C) The American dollar will become the currency of the World. After severe problems with communist economies, the capitalist countries will consume their markets. The pound, the franc, and the mark will be merged into the dollar.
D) In the USA, a new political party will emerge to replace the old Democratic Party: Ted Kennedy will become the Founding Father of the new social institution. The priorities of the organization will be a direct threat to the rich ruling classes throughout the world. By

How to Read the Mounts of Your Own Palm

A Palmist must never read the lines of the palm without first examining the Mounts. The astute Palmist proceeds by certain steps. First the person's Basic Nature is determined by the shape of the hand. Next, the Talents are determined by examining the Mounts. Only then can the lines be meaningfully read.

The Mounts are fleshy mounds encircling the palm like a range of mountains. These mounds have been assigned astrological names and meanings and represent our talents. Today I am giving a brief explanation of the Mounts, their locations in the palm, and their meanings.

The relatively largest mound on the hand is the Mount of Venus, the Thenar prominence located at the base of the thumb inside the Line of Life. It represents creative drive, charm, charisma, libido and passion. It is normally large in a Fire hand, and flat in a Water hand. Lacking any other talent, someone with a large Mount of Venus can always succeed using their seductive charm in a career of sales.

Right above the thumb, also inside the Line of Life, is the inner (or lower) Mount of Mars. The outer (or upper) Mount of Mars is located across the palm at the percussion of the hand. They are called upper and lower according to their position relative to the Line of Head. I prefer to call them inner and outer according to the quality of their energy. Mars represents aggression, courage, dicipline, and resulting wounds. The inner Mars, nearer to the thumb, represents these qualities as directed inwardly toward oneself, i.e. self-respect or self-criticism. Injuries noted here are self-inflicted. The outer Mars, at the percussion of the palm, represents assertiveness and courage as directed outwardly toward others. Wounds noted here are from fights with others. Here, also, are marked diseases of the stomach.

The mound below the index finger is the Mount of Jupiter. It, together with its finger, represents leadership, ambition and pride. A large Mount with a finger longer than the ring finger represents the qualities of a powerful leader. Here are marked diseases of the throat.

The mound below the middle finger is the Mount of Saturn. It and its finger represent morals, ethics, principles, melancholy as well as institutions like marriage and the church. An Arch fingerprint here represents unbending principles. Diseases of the ears and bones are marked on this Mount.

The mound below the ring finger is the Mount of Sun. It and its finger represent art talent, money and fame. An asterisk on the Mount is the first of an inheritance. A Sun finger longer than the index finger means abundant art talent. A whorl fingerprint here is the mark of an artist rather than one who appreciates art and beauty. Diseases of the heart and eyes are marked here.

The mound below the pinkie is the Mount of Mercury. It and its finger generally represent shrewdness and quick wit. Specifically they depict five important talents: communication, science, business, medicine and magic. A pinkie longer than 2/3 the ring finger, along with a large Mount, is usually found in the hand of the shrewdest people, while a short, low set finger is one mark of a fool. Diseases of the brain are marked here.

Below the Mount of Mercury is the outer Mount of Mars. Below Mars, along the percussion of the hand down to the wrist, is the Mount of Moon. Moon represents the ocean of imagination, intuition and emotions. Journeys are marked here, as well as signs of insanity and nervous breakdown. Diseases of the intestines, bladder and genitalia are marked on the various parts of this Mount. A square on the Mount symbolizes protection against insanity.

Between the Mounts of Moon and Venus, just near the wrist, is the newly discovered Mount of Neptune. It represents spiritual direction and is curiously frequently absent in the older generation.

A large mound represents an abundance of talent. A flat mound is normal and unremarkable. A valley instead of a mound represents the negative aspect of the talent, i.e. infamy instead of fame. A soft mound in a firm hand reveals a hidden deficiency. A mound scored over with nonspecific capillary lines depicts a talent lost in confusion. The lines associated with the Mounts represent the products of these talents. A large Mount lacking a corresponding line means talent unused.

The lines alone can mean many things. Once the basic nature is established and the special talents and deficiencies are identified, then the lines can be read in the context of the whole person.

I hope you enjoyed reading about the Mounts of the Hand. I will talk about the lines in the next issue of Psychic Life magazine. May we all live in peace and prosperity until then.☆

Paranoia: A Psychic's Disease

It's a nice day today. Are you concerned that your phones are tapped? Do you wonder why you are followed from your work place by a police car regularly? Do you have to weed out the spies from the students for each class you teach? Does your bank statement and checks get held up periodically by the post office so they could be gone over with a fine tooth comb? Do you get holograms of you dying or getting sick directed at you? Do you find that when you play golf you get matched up with intelligence agents of various governments? Do you get microwaves and ultrasound waves beamed at you to see how it affects your abilities? Do you have to worry about when someone is going to blast into your home or office with a search or arrest warrant for what they think you are doing because they don't want to know what you really are doing? Do you ever think that if you think about these things you might be labelled paranoid and sent to the nut house? Maybe not, unless you're a professional psychic. All of these things have become a part of the everyday life of a psychic. I have been experiencing and observing in others these "paranoid" activities for more than 10 years. It doesn't matter what you are interested in, it's what they think you are interested in or what they are interested in about you.

Who are "they"? "They" are the ones who send you to the psychiatrist if you talk about "them." Have you ever worked in a psychiatric ward? I have. There are many people who are locked up in one place or another because they were psychics (not "professional" psychics) who started to experience what was going on in the world around them: but we have been programmed that it doesn't really happen except in spy and thriller novels and movies. Some of these people screamed that scientists were experimenting with their minds. Others screamed that the CIA or the KGB were doing it to them with machines. These people started as sensitive psychics, now most of them have been turned into "crazies".

Who are "they"? Do you know?

Who are "they"? "They" are the underside, if you will, of the "Medical Inquisition" that I have been writing about in this column since Vol. 1 No. 2, 1980.

Inquisition: "...3...A former tribunal in the Roman Catholic Church directed at the suppression of heresy..." (American Heritage Dictionary)

Medical Inquisition: A present tribunal in the American Medical Association, et al directed at the suppression of heresy.

Heresy: "1.a. An opinion or doctrine at variance with established religious beliefs... 2.a. A controversial or unorthodox opinion or doctrine in politics, philosophy, science, or other fields. b. Adherence to such unorthodox opinion..." (American Heritage Dictionary)

The healers are grouped with political criminals.

In ancient Greece, the law stated that "asebeia" or failing to worship State gods was a capitol offense:

"Socrates is a public offender in that he does not recognize the gods that the State recognizes, but introduces new demoniacal beings..." (Ueberweg, F. History of Philosophy, Vol. I, p. 81, in Kenneth Clark's Civilizations). Socrates, of course, was put to death.

"...We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ a King." (Luke 23:2)

In early Roman laws, heresy and blasphemy were classified with treason since the gods and the State went hand in hand. And the punishment was usually death. When there were no accusers of these crimes, the Roman judge would summon the suspect and make an "inquisitio" (inquiry) into the case.

By the latter part of the twelfth century A.D., antagonism against established religion became open and widespread. Psychics were starting to come out of the closets. The seeds of the Papal Inquisition had sprouted. History books tell us about the Inquisition as the Catholic Church versus the heretics. But there is far more to the Inquisition than just that. Who were all the people who would benefit from the Inquisition? In fact some benefitted far more from it than the Catholic Church. Who wanted control over both the church and the State?

Whenever capable psychics begin to come out of the closets, the spiritual changes they produce on the planet start to break up the games of control and enslavement of human beings. Unfortunately, when this occurs, those in power get upset and pit their pawn slaves against the free. Confusion sets in as in times of natural catastrophes. While the petty thieves loot the abandoned stores, the real thieves count their blessings that their plan to divide and conquer is succeeding. The psychics meanwhile never get credited with doing what they are really doing but are punished as scapegoats to divert the attention of everyone from the real crimes being committed in their midsts.

The seeds of the Inquisition were planted at the time of the nadir of the papacy, then the later failures of the crusades. The Moslems, the Jews, and the controlling religious orders of the East in spite of their antagonism to each other wanted to see the Catholic Church as well as the whole of Christianity destroyed. This level of agreement was formulating as the psychics and healers of nations began to reappear. Amusingly enough psychics are blamed for all sorts of uncommitted crimes. Credit for what they really do create goes many times to the very ones who commit the crimes. The capable psychics who are healers are shoved into the same class as political terrorists. Healers can create miracles; the orthodoxy cannot by their very nature. And thus the healers are branded as heretics: Heresy being treason. The healers are grouped with political criminals. To the intellectual ready and eager to punish spirit, the healer wearing the same clothes and using the same words as the group of criminals around him are punished in the same fashion for what he did not do. The Renaissance has been traditionally credited to intellectuals but was in truth made possible through the work of the great unknown psychics who paved the way so that some of the great intellectuals could produce the physical works they are credited with. So, what else is new?

The Papal Inquisition was made official by Gregory IX in 1227 when he appointed a board of inquisitors headed by a Dominican monk. An inquisition normally began with the arrest of all suspects or a visiting inquisitor may summon the entire town for preliminary examination. Those who confessed heresy and repented were let off with brief imprisonment or other lesser punishment. (Today, all healers and psychics are considered criminals unless they agree to some form of state licensing for each and everything they do). Those who did not confess and repent and have evidence against them that they are heretics, got sent before the inquisitorial court of usually 12 men chosen by a local state official from a list presented by the bishop and inquisitors. The condemned were turned over to state authorities for punishment. (In the Medical Inquisition, the medical profession condemns, the state officials punish.)

Only Christians were subject to the Inquisition. Jews and Moslems were exempt from the inquisitors.

Today another Inquisition is growing. It is the Medical Inquisition. Healers and psychics are the "heretics" against the state god AMA. Heretics are no longer burned at the stakes, but are burned in the courts of law through humiliation, degradation, harrassment, and the draining of financial resources by way of exorbitant legal costs which we are told cannot be recovered. Those who "confess" and "repent" after being flogged with legal words and police harrassment by allowing the state to "license" them are permitted to be healers and psychics by name and only according to rules and regulations that know nothing of healing at all. Contrary to the law that allows us to be innocent until proven guilty, healers are considered to be practicing medicine unless we can prove otherwise. For the first time, the medical profession is being threatened by the tides of a revolution promulgated by healers who present alternatives to the pill and the scalpel both of which have been indoctrinated into our minds as the real replacement for God.

"Home delivery is the earliest form of child abuse...We must never—I repeat, never—compromise the health and safety of mother and child for the sake of popularity." (Martin L. Stone, M.D., in inaugural address as president of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, 1979)

"The only form of legislative control of chiropractic which makes sense is to prohibit its practice because it is a fraud...Whether the chiropractor is deceived, whether he fails to understand the irrationality of the chiropractic principle, or whether he deliberately practices deception of the public, we don't have to decide.

"...There is no such thing as compromise between science and fraud. Science is based upon demonstratable relations of fact to fact, not once or occasionally, by chance, but always. Fraud is circumvention of factual relation by deceit and trickery. One single admission of fraud into science destroys science." (Dr. Edward T. Wentworth, past president, Medical Society of the State of New York, quoted in Professional Power and American Medicine, Elton Rayach, pp.254-255)

Who now sits on the Infallible Chair keeping alive the coals of the Medieval Inquisition? Who has the most to gain by seeing that the medical profession continues with the state to persecute healers and psychics? Who are "they"? Do you know?

Remember, if you think about these things and, heaven forbid, talk about them, "they" might try to make you into a crazy, insane maniac.

Insanity: "...2.a. Civil Law. Unsoundness of mind sufficient, in the judgement of a court, to render a person unfit to maintain a contractual or other legal relationship or to warrant commitment to a mental hospital..." (American Heritage Dictionary)

Remember also that: "No person who is being treated by prayer in the practice of the religion of any well-recognized church, sect, denomination or organization, shall be ordered detained or committed under this chapter unless the court shall determine that he is or would likely become dangerous to himself or to the person or property of others, or unless being a minor, his parent or guardian having custody of his person shall consent to such detention or commitment." (Welfare and Institution Code section 63001)

It's still a nice day today. ☆

Users Guide for Staying in Amusement

HELLO COMPUTER HELLO DO YOU READ ME?

by Cindy Stakes

When you want to communicate with a computer, there are several things you should remember. The first thing you have to understand is that computers (any machine that stores information) are ruthless. They have no souls, or spirits, save the ones they are given by the current owners (i.e. corporations, private businesses), usually in the form of alien beings. If you try to remove the "visitors" you may get into the middle of a game (the Corporate Control game) that may be hazardous to your health. They also try to steal the soul of the current operator.

The second thing to remember is that computers have no sense of humor. However, they love nothing better than to absorb yours. The more they absorb of your humor, the more they can play on the screen, and the less you have for yourself! Once they have absorbed all of your humor, they then enjoy confusing any material you input.

If you have or operate a computer, an important thing to do is to let it know who is the user and who is the computer. Sit in front of your machine and introduce yourself. Say "Hello, I am the user, you are the computer." Very good. Simple, but effective.

Third, even though man has installed a plug or cord from which the machine draws it's life force energy (electricity is energy) the machine can be a bit rebellious. Most computers like to draw the life force energy out of any body within 15 feet of its screen. Usually they go for the charkas (energy centers in the body). They will plug into more than one and will drain the energy even before you realize what's happening! You may have experienced this plug or cord: when the system goes "down" and you suddenly feel a loss, sort of like your date cancelling at the last minute with a lame excuse. Or, when you would rather be with your computer, alone. The worst is when you begin to talk about your machine as if it's a partner. "Well, you know, my P.C. and I were up most of the night playing with the new input . . ." Danger time.

What to do with these symptoms and how to prevent them might be foremost on your mind. Don't panic. These symptoms aren't a problem. All you need is a "program package" designed for the machine. We'll call it "Human Being." This package comes with a disk called "Communications." This program is user friendly. Below are the contents of this hypothetical program:

a) The "Hello" Program
This keeps those "visitors" from confusing your system. It comes with a special addition called "Grounding" - a stabilizing component that may be used on both you and the computer.

b) "My Body, My Soul"
This is the graphics portion of the program. Images of roses, kept between you and the screen keep you and the computer from merging programs. These graphic roses are also useful when separation needs to occur at the end of your computer communication. No matter how exciting the interlude with your computer might be, when it's over, it's over.

c) "Amusement"
Keep this program with you at all times. It comes with a dozen power packs, so you'll never lose this component.

d) "Golden Sun"
This is the recharge pack for the whole program. Unlimited supplies are available. Requires average active imagination: bring gold light energy into your head to replace glitches and cursors in your aura.

e) "Akashic Records"
How to retrieve lost or missing information. Custom made for each operator, this part of the program comes in particularly useful when you have forgotten who is the user and who is the computer!

All of these can be interfaced with each other, or used individually. They can also be expanded into a program called "The Clairvoyant Training Program" (See Berkeley Psychic Institute listing on page 55), which assists you in identifying the computer marauders called alien beings, and which allows you to use and sort all of these other programs.

In this age of computer franchising you can get this special package and the above program at only a select location. It is called the Computer Class of the Berkeley Psychic Institute.

Psychics teach computer literacy, programming and how to take your seniority back from a computer. A hands on class, it also introduces students to basic psychic protection techniques to be used at home, any place and between friends.

Psychic Children

by Mary Bell

The Kids Know Best

CHOOSING CHILDREN'S SOFTWARE

Many educators and parents are looking at computers for their children. What is appropriate? Is preschool too young to begin teaching children how to use a computer? What skills do computers teach young children? How do you know which program to use? Which programs fit most computers.

Computers are like TV or anything else - too much or too little doesn't work. The Parent or Teacher soon finds a happy medium in how much time a child should spend working on a computer. Like adults, some children tend to get pulled into a computer, losing track of time and the events going on around them. Parents can help children learn how to "stay out" of a computer and remind them to use their skills, by monitoring their computer time. Keep in mind children three to six years old are going to approach computers like they do singing, playing in the sandbox or reading. Exploring them, but not usually spending hours plodding away at them.

The difference between young preschool and elementary or high school age children is their coordination and manual dexterity. Adults need to find a program that allows time and requires single computer input rather than quick reflexes.

Computers teach a variety of skills, such as matching, letters, shapes, colors, patterning, sequencing and prepositions. Some games challenge children's ability to match patterns with sounds; different patterns - different sounds - same pattern - same sounds. Some programs are convergent, allowing only for one right answer (1 + 3 =). While these programs serve a specific purpose, most children tire easily with them - for there is no creative outlet or stimulation. The programs that stimulate or allow a child to create are divergent. These programs a child tends to play for a longer period of time. They allow a child to create an image and act it out on the TV monitor.

Children can be taught an easy energy tool to help them separate their energy from the computer's. This tool is called a rose shield. Ask your child to imagine or create a picture of a rose ten inches in front of him, between him and the computer screen. This rose acts like a sheild and keeps the child's energy in its body vs. going into the computer. A rose shield is a tool of protection and separation. This rose also reminds the child that the computer is just a fun game and mistakes aren't serious.

The best way to explore computer programs is to preview the program. Ask the dealer to let you try out the game. Here is a list of suggestioned elements to look for:

1. Games that allow the child enough time to respond.
2. Games that allow problem - solving or more than one answer.
3. Game consequences. Some young children become upset when their player disappears or gets "Eaten". They become responsible for it getting hurt or disappearing; hence they tend not to want to play. "If I make a mistake my man or animal friend gets hurt." Children identify with characters in the games.
4. Games that use color graphics and music that appeals.
5. Games children can identify with.

Some dealers will allow you to check out computer games in the store before purchasing. If your store doesn't do that, check with your local library and experiment around with programs. Pick your favorites and then take your child with you. By allowing children to pursue what stimulates and excites them, they will enjoy their computer time much more.

Also keep in mind computers will be around for a long time - allow your child to program at his own rate.

Last but not least I personally enjoyed these four programs, and would recommend them for preschool -aged children:

ALF - Alf is a funny, wonderful character who slides his way down tunnels. Each tunnel is a different shape and corresponds to a different sound. Alf is very non-threatening and the children quickly pick up sound-word combinations.

RANCH - Ranch is a very open ended program that allows children to pick out various characters and create a ranch setting. This program allows for story telling and can be accomplished on a very simple or highly complex level.

DUCKS AHOY - A delightful musical tune provides a setting for this mathematical game. The child steers a boat to little houses and anticipates little ducks coming out to take a ride. This is also a non-threatening program and the music is light hearted.

PAINT - A child can choose from many colors and paint a picture. Polaroid pictures can be taken from the screen, or can be reproduced on a printer for display. ☆

PSYCHIC SOFTWARE

It May Not Tell You Anything You Don't Already Know

by Erich Horn

There are a few computer programs on the market that give readings of one form or another. Some of these are: Bio-Rhythm program, Chart Casting, and personality tests. A program called "Mind Prober" is used to assess people for Business, Friendship, Sexuality, and Self Confidence. It basically works by asking a series of questions about a person and then creates a report telling how a person acts, reacts, and what his/her inner feelings are (even if they may want to hide them). Many of these such programs are used by big corporations in assessing their people, and with resumes and job interviews to better find out who they are hiring and whether they are a stable person.

There are many bio-rhythm programs on the market. bio-rhythm is based on the cycles of the Physical, Intellectual, and Emotional (some have other cycles but these are the basic three). This works by telling you when you will be using more of one of the three, and also by telling critical days when it would be good to watch your step. This has been used by many cab and bus companies.

There are also quite a few astrology and horoscope programs which cast a chart for you and give some degree of interpretation.

It is thought by many "A Machine can't read someone's mind" or "Machines are getting so capable that they may take over." Well these are both true. Computers like machines are tools. And the better you use a tool the better it works for you. Machines are sometimes programmed to take on human characteristics, but even these are just mimicking the author's ideas as a person might imitate someone's voice. So with Mind Prober, it is programmed to group personality traits together in a formula to get a result of its personality report. i.e.: (a concerned person) + (not a social person) = (inward feelings of invalidation) or (self trashing).

There are also programs that mimic a counseling session such as Eliza or some of its counterparts. The programs seem to talk with you (conversationally) through a typewriter and video screen. Eliza listens for key words, such as: dreams, dreaming, love, hate, scared, problems, and others, and is designed to get people to talk about charged things within themselves by steering conversations in the direction of these key words. This is the very first program I ever used on a computer. It is quite good for getting people out of fear about computers. ☆

Special Thanks to Software 1st, San Rafael for loan of the Mind Prober Program.

Psychic Glossary

...words used by psychic to communicate about spirit and psychic abilities. Clairvoyants tend to use simple words that describe what they "see" spiritually.

AURA: the energy of spirit emanating from the body.

BEING: the immortal spiritual self. The spirit.

CHAKRA: Sanskrit term meaning wheel, symbolizing the seven major energy centers in the body.

CLAIRVOYANT: a person who sees light rays, energy, auras and symbols.

ENERGY LEVEL: specific vibrations of the aura that can be seen as color.

GROUNDING: releasing energy that is foreign to the body through the use of an energy cord connected from the base of the spine to the center of the planet.

GUIDE: a being that may act as teacher, healer, or helper to you in your spiritual evolvement. May be an old friend from a past life; often appears to a clairvoyant as it was in its favorite incarnation.

HEALING MASTER: a spirit guide with a tremendous amount of healing information. When Healing Masters are used by a healer, both the healer and guide profit. The healer learns how not to give away all his/her own energy and about communicating with spirit in addition to receiving new healing information.

KNOWINGNESS: intuitive information from the being to the body.

MEDITATION: communication with your spiritual self and the God of your heart.

PICTURES: mental images that appear in the aura and can be seen by a clairvoyant.

PSYCHIC: soul essence. A person who is sensitive to energy.

PSYCHIC HEALING: communication to, and acknowledgement of, you as a spirit with/in a body.

READING: the act of being in an altered state, where a psychic tunes his energy to see, and know symbols, light, and mental images.

SEEING: experiencing energy on a visual level. A clairvoyant "sees" not only the physical world more clearly, but the spiritual as well.

SPACE: as in "she invaded my space". A psychic lingo term for aura or the sensitive energy of the body.

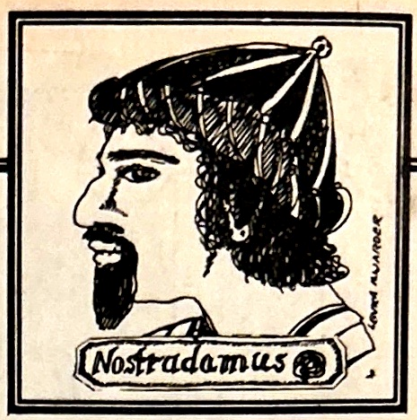
SUPREME BEING: God. Creator.

THIRD EYE: located at the center of the forehead. A type of opening and screen through which a clairvoyant views energy. also called the 6th chakra.

TRANCE MEDIUM: one who has physical and spiritual programming that allows another being to occupy the body. Often the foreign being speaks through a person (for example, Edgar Cayce).

VALIDATION: permission to have and communicate about your own certainty regarding yourself and what you are experiencing. To a psychic, validation is often communicating with others who are experiencing the same things.

Historical Psychics



by David Doyle

SOCRATES: "Improver of the Soul"

Socrates is one of the most famous communicators of recorded history. His works are handed down to us through the hand of Plato, disciple and great friend of Socrates.

What Platos records for us is the knowledgable side of Socrates. But we see more than just that: we get to know his ubiquitous spirit and how it foils and beguiles his challengers. Socrates talks to one and yet everyone at the same time. This fifth chakra (throat energy center) ability rewards him, yet contributes to his downfall.

Socrates was a philosopher and truly a lover of knowledge and a cultivator of wisdom, such wisdom as comes from discriminating between what we really know and what we think we know.

Of the details of Socrates life, not much has survived, and much of it is disputed. He was born in 469 B.C. and his father was a sculptor. His mother was believed to be a midwife.

In regards to his education, the evidence suggests that he received no more than that generally given to boys, nor that he received any formal coaching in philosophy.

Socrates was known as an eccentric.

He wore the same clothes throughout the year, went barefoot, and professed to be under the guidance of a God.

Throughout most of his life Socrates went about the Athenian state in search of knowledge. He went to any and all who professed to know something in hopes that he might obtain some wisdom. It was not his cause to go about invalidating their claims of knowledge, nor did he derive satisfaction from finding out that in most cases those who professed to know a lot knew very little.

As Socrates would say, "I am that gadfly which God has attached to the state, and all day long and in all places am always fastening upon you, arousing and persuading and reproaching you."

Socrates maintained that the only thing he knew was that he knew nothing. Yet, during his time a certain Chaerephon went to Delphi and asked the oracle if there was any man wiser than Socrates, and the answer was that there was none wiser.

Socrates was confounded by the declaration and set out to disprove it by finding a wiser man than himself.

His method of inquiry or the "Socratic Method" was that of induction and definition. He thoroughly questioned Euthyphro, in Plato's writing of the same name on the issue of Piety and Impiety, loving to inspect, define and/or refute an unacceptable idea.

Socrates wanted to know the one idea which makes the impious impious and the pious pious. Piety, Euthyphro explained, is that which is dear to the gods and impiety is that which is not dear to them. Socrates refuted this by saying that the gods often disagree among themselves about that which is dear and not dear.

That Socrates was good at pursuing an answer is beyond question. He had patience far beyond that of most of the men he questioned and his memory and ability to trail an idea and stay focused on it was awesome. And it is the Socratic Method that is most remembered by the historians and logicians and philosophers of today. Yet what is interesting is that the real Socrates was a great psychic and in Plato's writings one can see a person who was very aware of spirit, and in touch with his soul.

In the "Trial and Death", Socrates was accused of being a corruptor of youth and of being impious. The problem was that while not everyone took him so seriously, the youth that followed him around had begun to learn not to be so easily programmed by assumers of knowledge and those of "authority". They began to question also.

Socrates bid us to look within ourselves, and to do what we believe to be right:

"I say to you that daily discourse about virtue, and of those other things about which you hear me examining myself and others, is the greatest good of man, and that the unexamined life is not worth living..."

Socrates is aware of his ability as a spirit, and he is aware of the problems of having a body:

"When the soul and the body are united, then nature orders the soul to rule and govern, and the body to obey and serve. Now which of these two functions is akin to the divine? and which to the mortal? Does not the divine appear to you to be that which naturally orders and rules, and the mortal to be that which is subject and servant?" Later he examines the problem; ". . . because each pleasure and pain is a sort of nail which nails and rivets the soul to the body, until she (the soul) becomes like the body, and believes that to be truly agreeing with the body and having the same delights, she is obligated to have the same habits and haunts..."

To Socrates his life as a philosopher was not just a love of wisdom, it was a love of growth and "the greatest improvement of the soul." In the "Phaedo" some of his disciples are gathered and are trying to persuade him to escape and Socrates shows us more clearly his idea of what a true lover of wisdom is:

"...the real philosopher has reason to be of good cheer when he is about to die, and that after death he may hope to obtain the greatest good in the other world... For I deem that the true votary of philosophy is likely to be misunderstood by other men; They do not percieve that he is always pursuing death and dying..."

(Psychic Life writer David Doyle interviewed the spirit of Socrates through trance medium Simon Wirth. The following is two parts (1) questions answered by Simon about Socrates and (2) the entity himself coming through and using Simon's vocal cords to talk to Psychic Life Readers... editor)

Part One

About the cup of poison Hemlock: The physical body becomes the shell to be given up at certain times of the year as a snake would shed its skin, and so the body was shed (in trade) for a level of information. Socrates wished not to be so limited by the physical, but to realize and experience his own spirituality, to say "hello" to himself as spirit and to recognize a life after life is a life before life and so be it... (about the hemlock) there was no choice. If one was to have honor and courage, one then takes the acceptable form of that. When one wishes to be honored, one takes a different route. When one honors oneself, one does not care to take a route.

About Obstacles in Communicating as a Psychic: Many were sheep in that they blinded themselves to the truth they had within themselves. Socrates would ask questions and in those questions as in a psychic reading in present time, the truth could be revealed.

Jesus used parables to say things to many who could hear, but Socrates and Plato would mask the information with intellectual one-ups-manship. It was a tool for those who could hear.

Part Two

Words from Socrates to Psychic Life Readers: Be what you are, what else can you be? What would you be, would you be that which others would notice? Or would you be that which you would notice? A moment is a space in time, created by people for their amusement, for their joy, for their interest, for knowledge that can be shared. If this knowledge is to be shared, then there is the validation, if something is to be withheld, then there is not the validation. If something is to be revealed, then there is the growth.

Food for Psychics

Machines Can Make You Sick

NUTRIENTS FOR PREVENTION

This is a very interesting time to be on the planet. Changes are happening so fast it is hard for many of us to keep up with them. It has taken us a long time to get to this energy level on the planet so if you find yourself resisting you might want to take a deep breath and say hello to present time, and be amused.

This issue of Psychic Life is taking a look at one level of the changes: computers. It is interesting that younger people seem to be more in affinity with these and other "high tech" gadgets than some of us older folks. I have heard that some older executives of big companies have not been able to learn to use computers. It's been reported that in the very center of the industry, the silicon valley, there is a very high rate of cocaine use. The modern offices of companies of all kinds seem to be places of stress for everyone from clerk to secretaries to executives. There are many reasons for this stress of course. I want to talk about just one, the energy from computers and other office machines and the effect on the body.

First some other opinions on the subject-In his book "Vitamin Bible", Earl Mindell reports under his section on environmental pollutants: "electronic devices, flouresent lights, dyes and inks emit an odorless form of mercury...duplicating machines give off fumes that cause visual problems, fatigue, headaches." His answer to these and all forms of polution are the group of nutrients called antioxidants, which "are capable of protecting other substances from oxidation". This oxidation is believed by many researchers to be the main cause of the adverse effects of pollution on the body, including many forms of cancer. The antioxidants are vitamins A,C,E and the mineral selenium.

In his book "Your Body Doesn't Lie", John Diamond M.D., takes a different approach. A very interesting book based on the role of the thymus gland in regulating body energy. He has developed a test call BK (Behavioral Kinesiology), as a way of asking the body what is good for it. Some of his conclusions: fluorescent lights;..."brightness was so intense that it penetrated the skull"... "perhaps through the pineal gland".... "the pineal gland responds to light and is the determiner of biological rhythms within the body."

He finds X rays, electrical generators and microwaves as bad for the life energy of the body.

He concludes however: "If a person has more Life Energy than average, or is well centered, he will not be made weak by a negative stimulus that would weaken someone else".

"...electronic devices, flouresent lights emit an odorless form of mercury that cause visual problem, fatigue, headaches" - Vitamin Bible.

He also talks of the effects of Sound on the body; "..our bodies can discriminate between beneficial and detrimental sounds,"... He sites the long life of symphony conductors as an example of the benefits of "good" music.

He also recommends the "Thymus Thump", tapping the chest over the gland, to stimulate the flow of Life Energy.

And now for the psychic point of view. Rev. Katie Kiem (see her article this issue) is a psychic who works with office machines of all kinds, and is aware of the effects on her body. She has found that the energy from electronic machines upset the normal body rhythms and can cause dehydration, vitamin deficiency and affect the adrenal, pineal and thymus glands. She feels it is important to keep a separation from the machine and validate the body. She suggests taking breaks out in the sunshine whenever possible. She has found that certain smells help maintain the separation, lemon is her body's favorite.

This writer's personal experience with office equipment has been limited. Fred, my cockatoo, protests loudly when exposed to fluorescent lights. When handling paper from copy machines, I can taste the chemicals used in it.

Looking clairvoyantly at the affect on bodies this is what I see in general.

People who work in the office environment will have a tendency to match the energy of the equipment. The rhythm of the machine is not the same as the natural lifeforce rhythm. This makes it hard to stay in the body. This can also put certain body systems under stress. The main systems I see affected are the endocrine, lymph and nervous systems. These are important systems for a psychic. The endocrine glands (chakras) are where the spirit plugs into and manifests through the body. The lymph system is important to the bodys ability to heal itself. The nervous system is the way the spirit knows how energy is affecting the body.

(Michael Kolack, not only teaches nutritional awareness of psychics, but Kundalini and Clairvoyant Training Classes as well... editor)

The doctor recommends the "Thymus Thump", tapping the chest over the thymus gland, to stimulate the flow of Life Energy.

A good balanced diet helps the body deal with the energy of machines-especially dark green and yellow vegetables and enough protein. Eggs look good. Watch the sugar and coffee. Supplements may be needed. The antioxidants mentioned previously, and stress vitamins B complex, extra B5, stress minerals calcium, magnesium and zinc. And try the thymus thump.

Limitless Awareness Through Computers

RAISE YOUR CONSCIOUSNESS

by Katie Keim

A few months after I began the Clairvoyant Training Program of the Berkeley Psychic Institute, I started working with computers. I was looking clairvoyantly at how computers affected my space and how they affected other people that work with them.

One of the most common things I observed is how people's bodies and energy fields change. I first noticed that the chakras (energy vortexes in the body) lost their roundness. They looked square and the energy quit flowing. Bodies lost their softness; they became more dense, more machine like. I was matching the energy of the computer! This was like becoming the computer. I observed this problem not only with computer workers, but anyone working with machines, be it a typewriter, a telephone or an espresso machine! I also observed that as people match the computer's energy, they start to lose their sense of being male or female.

I also observed a peculiar dichotomy. First I saw that there was a loss of body-being communication. The "hello" from spirit to body was gone. This seemed to come from that person holding a mental image picture that computers are more capable than the person operating it. There was also a picture that computers will rule the world. Some of the energy that accompanies this picture comes from machines being indestructable and our human bodies being so vulnerable, so destructable. As someone runs into this energy he starts to give his seniority up to the computer and starts to lose his space, and thus creates a loss of body-being communication. The second part of the dichotomy was an expanding awareness in computer people. Computer operators became aware of how the computer is a limitless vehicle to be programmed or used in any fashion that we choose. This seems to be the key word; limitless. As people match the computer's energy in its different capacities they are matching its limitlessness as well. Suddenly they become aware of their own limitlessness as a spirit in a body. Their own mental processes seem to become keener and more stimulated. They also become aware that as a spirit they are capable of creating anything that they choose. This is where I see the intense competition in the computer field coming from; it is the limitless awareness.

As someone becomes aware of her limitlessness I also observed how she becomes aware of boundaries that have been set up in her space. This is where the loss of body-being communications ties in. As people become aware of these levels in themselves, and they don't have any tools to start neutralizing these boundaries they start to get stuck; it's easier at this point to disregard spirit, at least this way they don't have to do anything with this growing awareness. On the other hand I have observed a growing attention on psychics from people in the computer field. I see that they want to know more about what is happening to them, to start working with their own limits and to release the energy that keeps them unaware. When it is said that computers are changing the world it seems to be happening in more than the business world! Have fun! ☆

From Curses to Cursors

In 1980 I had been given a new Apple II Plus computer for my home office. I would now set aside my typewriter and manifest the things people promised my Apple would do. My Apple was installed with disk drives, monitor and a mess of interconnecting wires I never understood. My Olivetti was relegated to a dark backroom. I remember staring at my Apple for two weeks. (I snuck into the dark typewriter corner, installed a light, pencils and whiteout and felt oh, so secure.) When the program arrived, it took an engineer to decipher it. I was getting suspicious of whether or not I would ever get "into" a computer. Glitches, multiple cursors, appeared everywhere. Entering the computer age was filled with anxiety, failure and a belief that I would never feel comfortable with a computer. It worked for others, but never me.

Today, after trying the Apple II Plus and Apple IIe, I have an Apple IIc in my home office which I praise highly. I can even understand the Appleworks no-fail program. Now who am I going to give my Olivetti to? All the kids have computers. It is amusing to watch kids take five minutes to dominate a computer. It only took me five years. - SHB

by Cree West

The Knife Was Karma

Hello. My name is Cree West and I am presently a clairvoyant student at the Berkeley Psychic Institute. There is a psychic ability called "clairaudience" and that means the ability to hear spirit. I would like to share with you a little story of when this ability, rather dramatically, manifested itself in my life.

When I was nine years old, I was living in Phoenix, Arizona. One day I got a real creative idea. Not too far from where I lived was a huge stretch of vacant land. At one time there had been a big building on this land, but by then the building was gone and all that was left was the floor, which was about one hundred yards of cement, with a partial basement under it. Through the years, weeds had grown up through the cracks in the cement and there was broken glass everywhere. So I had a brainstorm of a plan. I talked to a girl friend of mine named Mary and said to her, "Let's get brooms and sweep off the surface of this floor, get rid of the broken glass, pick out all the weeds, and we will have a roller-skating rink just for us." We started early one day, working away. It took us all that day to accomplish our task.

Well, around sunset, we hooked on our roller skates to our shoes and were just going to get to try out "our roller-skating rink," when we saw a boy approaching us from across the cement. He attended the fourth grade with us, so my friend Mary said, " Hi, Howard."

Right then, a voice said into my ear, "Howard has a butcher knife concealed behind his back, and he is going to try and kill you and your little friend." Without missing a beat, I realized that we were never going to make it running away from him with roller skates on, running over a dirt terrain. So I said euphorically, " Howard, we were sweeping off this cement so we could roller skate and guess what? We found buried treasure in the basement under the building - gold coins, everything! Howard, go look."

About this time, Mary looked at me like was nuts and commenced telling Howard that I was lying about finding buried treasure. She got out the words "There's no..." I remember a flash of anger overtook me at that point, so that when I jerked my leg and gave her ankle bone a direct hit with my roller skate, I really meant it.

I couldn't believe it! I was trying to get us out of there alive and she was actively working against us. It was enough to piss off a "Good Humor" man. I didn't realize she didn't know what was going on. By now she had dropped to the cement, moaning and yelling in pain.

So I said to Howard, "Go and look in the basement. Buried treasure. We're all rich. It's wonderful!" Howard veered off and went to investigate.

I dropped down to the cement, grabbed my skate key, and started taking off my skates. As I was doing this, I said to my friend, "Shut up. Howard has a butcher knife behind his back and he is going to try to kill us. Take off your skates, and when I say 'run,' run!"

Now Howard came up from the basement, mad, mad, mad! He said, "There's no buried treasure down there." He pulled out a foot and a half long butcher knife from behind his back and started running towards us.

I said, "Run!" We ran for our lives and just made it to safety, which happened to be a trailer court about a block away. We banged on the door of the nearest trailer and an adult helped us out by giving us safety and calling the police.

Well, Howard chose that time, that day on Earth, to go berserk. They took him away and he was never seen at our school again!

Looking back, I never thought that there was anything strange about hearing that voice that warned me. What I thought was strange was that my friend didn't know anything about the danger we were in and I did.

Children many times haven't been invalidated on their psychic abilities, so they just use them and don't think another thing about it. ☆

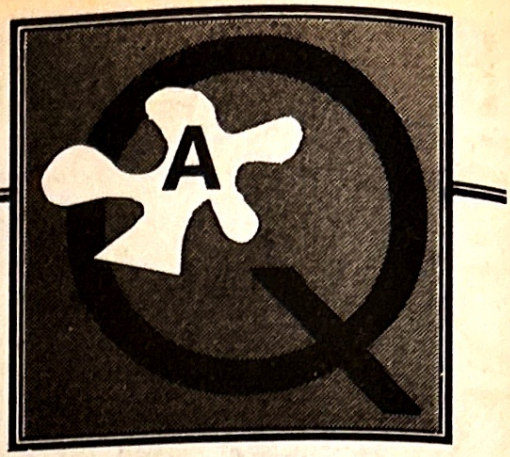
Psychic Questions & Answers

by Carol McCarthy



Q. Is aura reading an ability that be can developed?

A. Yes. And "to develop" is a good way to describe this ability. One already has the ability. In other words aura reading isn't an ability that one has to go out and acquire. It's already there. It is simply a matter of bringing it out, developing, or using it.

In everyday life that people "read" each other constantly. Picking up signals and energy is very easy. Developing the ability to read an aura is tapping into this same area. It is like using your muscles. The more you use them the stronger they become. Aura reading is a natural ability that is great fun to develop and use. The more neutral one is to energy, the easier it is to "read" an aura. Generally reading is communicating about colors and mental image pictures within the aura.

Q. What do colors mean in the aura?

A. Colors can be a great way to interpret a vibration. It's like a common language to use. However, one particular color doesn't always mean the same thing. Red doesn't always mean anger, for instance. Depending on the vibration shade, tone or the fluidity, it can mean many different things - even vibrancy! There does seem to be a general interpretation of some colors, green for growth comes to mind, but there are as many interpretations as there people, and each person is really their own interpretor.

Q. Is being psychic the same as being intuitive?

A. Yes, but this is not all of the story. Being intuitive is part of being psychic, however, there are many many other abilities that are also psychic abilities. In using intuitiveness you may be using several abilities at once, inner voice, knowingness, clairvoyance. All of these abilities are part of being psychic. Many people use their intuitiveness in their business, in their relationships, and on a day to day basis. Using your abilities helps to acquire more information about yourself and others and can create a space for validation and certainty.

Q. What is a chakra?

A. A chakra is an energy center and the main seven chakras are located along the spine from the base of the spine to the top of the head. These energy centers contains information in them. The first chakra - located at the base of the spine contains energy information about the body's survival. This information is given to the body when it is in danger (crossing the street in front of a car) to tell the body to move out of the way. Sometimes even when the body isn't in danger (ie, changing jobs, moving) the chakra will act as an "alert" and give the appropriate information. You can control these chakras - if you feel "in survival" and are not really in survival, you can learn to control this energy center and heal it.

Progressing upward along the spine, is the second chakra - this is the emotional information center. Here is stores a wealth of emotional ranges and experiences.

The 3rd chakra - located at the solar plexis is the power center. The center for the distribution of this energy.

The 4th chakra - is in the heart center where you have information about self-affinity and affinity for others.

The 5th chakra - located at the communication center at the throat area. Sometimes coughs, sore throats are due to blocked energy in this information center.

The 6th chakra - often called the brow chakra or 3rd eye is located between the brows and is the center for clairvoyance.

The 7th chakra - located at the top of the head and where information of your knowingness and spirituality is.

These chakras give us a wealth of information and using and controlling them can give us a tremendous healing and sense of well being. ☆

Heavy Bodies: TAROT FOR MAKING CHANGES

Body-size is a big topic nowadays, especially for women. There have been many books and articles published about it with varying degrees of insight and helpful information. A few, such as Psychic Life, have viewed it from a spiritual point of view. This is essential for a thorough understanding of bodies and weight. Tarot can be very helpful in seeding clarity for assessing the advantages and disadvantages of one's physical size, making decisions about how one wishes one's body to be, and finding methods of making changes if desired. Tarot images are powerful because they can actually help us to change our minds, and it is in our mind that we carry most of the real "weight". Like crystals and silicon chips, each tarot card contains the information we invest in it. Just as we can re-program a computer, we can use this information to reprogram ourselves. Here is a small list of some tarot cards that can be used for meditation upon some of the causes and effects of body size:

Security (The Four of Pentacles) This image shows a person hugging pentacles tightly, and gives a message of protection. Often we can add extra layers to our bones when we feel vulnerable or unsafe in some ways. Psychics especially are known to need extra protection at times, due to their extreme sensitivity. This image can help to affirm an alternative, or inner source of safeness. Try placing it where you can see it often, and writing beneath it, "I am perfectly safe."

Maya (or The Empress) Some bodies are just naturally large- god or goddess-size one might say. Here is a card that affirms natural, healthy size; the Mother Goddess whose body is the great rolling earth, whose unconditional love brings it joyfully into being.

Birdalone (The Eight of Cups) This is an image of withdrawal from worldly demands; it shows a cloaked figure moving away, retreating into herself. Some people overeat because they feel lonely. Birdalone can help us to connect with all-one-ness, the true meaning of aloneness; a place where we enjoy our own company and can experience the richness and creativity that is only possible in solitude.

Madrone (or the Queen of Pentacles) This card shows a goddess or woman in harmony with the physical realm. Her energy flows, and you can see her loving connection to the plants and animals around her. As a mother she represents nurturance, the caring love we may have missed while growing up. Thus she combines a message of physical well-being and that of taking good care of oneself. Sometimes food can become a substitute for these things. Compulsive eating can result, as the spirit continues to seek love and is never satisfied. Images of caring and nurturance, accompanied by affirmations such as "I am loved," or "my spirit is nourished," can help to fill the gap. Other tarot images that can help with this is Ponding (The Two of Cups) and Aphrodite (The Lovers.)

Pele (or the Tower) This is a card of explosive, cleansing change. It can represent the release of pent-up anger. Extra weight on the bones can result from repressing anger and withholding communications. This image can help us to get in touch with these energies and seek safe ways to let them go.

Power (Strength) Some people put on extra weight when they feel overwhelmed or powerless. Here is an image of taking one's power with gentle firmness.

Temperance This is a card of harmonizing the five elements of the tarot: Fire, Water, Air, Earth, and Spirit. These symbolize our Actions, Emotions, Bodies, Thoughts, and Psychic Energies. Meditation on this card can be a positive affirming of harmony amongst all five aspects. It is also an image of self-discipline. No one should be made to feel that they are unacceptable because of their physical appearance. This is an age when more value is given to being "rich and thin," than to the common humanity of people whose bodies show the effects of time and nature. If you are unhappy with your body, you may be influenced by this way of thinking. Before tormenting yourself, check yourself out via tarot cards or a psycic healer. Are people really "overweight?" Or, as some feminists say, "over what weight?" Do they feel discontented with their bodies because of a dictate from society, or because they know that they would feel healthier and more comfortable if they changed? Any attempt at change must be accompanied by self-love. We are each beautiful in our own way, and we have the option to nurture that beauty in all it's uniqueness.☆

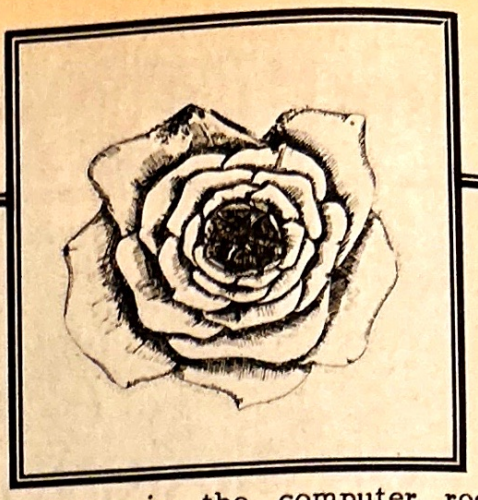
Missionary Healing Report



(As a special feature of this computer issue, the editors of This Is Your Psychic Life asked the Missionary Healers of the Berkeley Psychic Institute to read and heal the computer room that helps produce this magazine. Here is our report....editor)

The Date: Tuesday, May 21, 1985 The Place: Computer Room - Deja Vu Publishing Co. The Setting: Located in the same building as the Church of Divine Man offices, Marin Women's Healing Center, and Deja Vu Publishing Co.'s offices. On a weekday evening, with classes, business meetings, people working on production deadlines, and a female trance medium healing clinic all taking place, it was physically and psychically very crowded.

7:30 PM - The Healing Missionaries arrive. The room reserved for them next to the computer room was, of course, occupied. So they set up a reading line in the kitchen of the building, the only unclaimed room and a major thoroughfare for traffic.

7:45 PM - By now two different groups have asked them to do a healing on their program, rather than the computer room.

7:50 PM - This reporter arrives, unaccountably late for this major event. I re-claim the attention of the Missionary Healers for the computer room and dismiss all other requests. (The Missionary Healing Program of the Church of Divine Man involves ministers who go out on a healing mission to hospitals, homes, or businesses to read and heal the energy. These sessions are tapes.)

8:05 PM - It has taken us 15 minutes to locate a working tape recorder and we settled for re-using an old tape. There is lots of energy and attention keeping this healing from taking place!

8:15 PM - By now the Missionary Healers have secured their space in a room next door to the Deja Vu Publishing Co. computer room and have begun grounding the building. They begin identifying the many energies of the various activities going on in the building. A level of competition gets created between the programs just because of their close physical proximity. Four major high energy events involving upwards of 60 psychics are buzzing in the building at any given time.

8:17 PM - They take their first look at the computer room. The energy of the computer room vibrates between white and silver, and a definite "victim game" exists in the room. There is an agreement between the people both in the room and outside the room that "the machines are doing it to me." The Missionary Healers next become aware that they have fallen into a problem solving level that is very strong in the computer room. "Please solve my problem" energy is seething under the door way.

8:25 PM - They identify the energy of beings with bodies (mostly the computer operators themselves) as being inside the computers. The printers have beings without bodies in them. There is a spiderweb of energy networking out from all of the electrical lines running into the room. And all of the people who operate the computers have matching alien energy that is validated and activated by the computers, causing the operators to forget the difference between themselves and the computers. When they leave their energy in the computers, a competition for control of the computers gets created between the operators currently using the machines and the energy other operators have left behind. This causes computer malfunctions.

8:30 PM - The Missionary Healers next notice that other religious groups in the neighborhood feel threatened by the presence of psychics, and this attention focuses on the computer room. It energizes certain past life "pictures" or concepts in the auras of the computer operators. These past life pictures have to do with being a victim and having to sacrifice. This accounts for the stress that some of the operators experience as having to sacrifice their own energy when working with the computers, and the victim game mentioned above. Also, the bubble of energy that the computer operators keep around the room to protect themselves tends to separate them from reality, too.

8:55 PM - Missionary Healers begin healing the computer room. (It has taken one whole hour to remember that they are healers, and can change the energy of the computer room!) They remove the spirits who are like spiders, and the light crystal energy and the electrical energy that the "spiders" grid the room with. This grid kept the computer operators out of communication with other people in the building. And the spiders/spirits were collecting the information that ran through the computer and electrical lines.

9:17 PM - Begin working on the grounding of the computer room. Now that the spiders are gone, they can ground the room for the first time. When the room is grounded, the people in it lose their source of "junk" energy that kept them going; that high "on deadline" energy that actually kept everyone out of their bodies.

9:25 PM - Missionary Healers suggest that all computer personnel be de-programmed from the computers and the energy/spirits that were running through them.

Missionary Healers David Pell, Marc Shargel and Dian Hauser read the energy of Deja Vu Publishing Company's computer room at deadline time and discover that past lives can contribute to computer stress.

The energy of the computer room vibrates between white and silver and a definite victim game exists in the room. There is an agreement between the people both in the room and outside of the room that "the machines are doing it to me."

9:30 PM - They look at the agreement between all of the production and computer people that sets the energy of the computer room at a "problem" level, to keep everyone at their highest production level. This is a lie, since it means that the humans end up matching the high cycle of energy of the computers, and it burns the humans out. They suggest having a psychic energy room control whenever the computers are running, to help the operators keep their separations from the computers.

9:50 PM - After all the difficulty in getting started, there is now lots of attention for the Missionary Healers to keep going- "Dont Stop!" On this note, in amusement, they end their visit to the Deja Vu computer room. ☆

Where To Find A Psychic

The groups or individuals listed here were chosen by the editors because they define themselves as psychics and teach or give readings.

A listing in a future Spiritual Marketplace directory is free. An individual or group of integrity may apply for free listing by describing in three sentences or less their 1) creed and 2) activities. Current phone numbers, addresses and zip codes are required. Wholistic approaches to wellness may not always fit the needs of this directory. We are producing California's only exclusive directory of psychics. If you are offering a psychic service to the public, please feel welcome to send in your free listing: Spiritual Marketplace, Psychic Life Magazine, P. O. Spirits Caught

The four photographs in this special Spirit Photo Series were taken at a party attended by two clairvoyant students at the Berkeley Psychic Institute. The photos were taken with a Vivitar 35mm camera using a 50 mm Vivitar lense and Kodachrome 64 film. Following is a clairvoyant reading of the spirits who are making their appearances:

"In general, the spirits in these photos are associated with the photographer, in whose home the party took place. The spirits seem particularly interested in acquiring information, which they do on a regular basis from the photographer. He is an electrical engineer, and this somehow relates to the strong, linear appearance of the beings, and their mechanical-like interests.

"In photo #1, the soft appearance of this being is in contrast to the others. This spirit is a guide of the young man in the picture, and is of a very different nature. This spirit is accustomed to being in communication with humans, having had a body before. It can operate at a lower frequency, nearer that of people (spirit in bodies). This being is more polite than the others, showing at least an awareness of what it's like to be in a body, and has a valence of a friend or comrade. He has known this young man for many lifetimes.

In Photo #2, the main being is the large circular one on the right. This spirit almost seems to be posing for the camera, and is mimicking or "matching" the people in that respect. It seems to be interested in experiencing what it is like to be human, but in a playful way. It has even assumed a valance like that of a "smiley face."

"Photo #3 has four main beings in it. The three in the center are very unconcerned with any spiritual territory that the young man may have. They are feeding information directly out of his seventh and sixth chakras (energy centers in the top of the head and forehead, respectively), as well as plugging into various other chakras in his body. They are almost like medical sensors, monitoring how his body works. Off to the right is a soft red blur, which has a face in it. Visible in the original photograph, this is a dead relative of the person sitting underneath it.

"In Photo #4, some of the same beings are at work again. They are plugging into the auras of all the people shown. This is most organized in the man on the left, where you can see the individual "cords" or energy connections. These beings run a very high frequency of energy, and have never had bodies on this planet. They are here to get information about a wide variety of things. It is interesting to note that the man on the left, with whom they are most clearly "corded", works with computers. He is the most receptive because he is used to the beings who hang around his computers at work, and it feels quite normal for him to be "corded" like that. His aura has actual little hook-ups for the beings to use."

Casting Runes for Spiritual Growth

by Norris Phillips

Birth

New awareness of self worth and personal freedom.

Runes, letters of an alphabet used by ancient Germanic peoples, have been resurrected as a psychic tool. Considered to be the gift of Odin to Man, runes were symbolic guideposts to aid the Spiritual Warrior on his quest for freedom. In modern times, man has undergone a separation between himself and his natural environment and as a consequence has endangered his own physical survival. Runemasters were trained to observe the connection between natural phenomenon and the life adventures of the individual spirit.

A runemaster was expected to sharpen his psychic abilities by observation of the forces of nature. The Gods manifested their presence in natural forces of fire, water, wind and stone. Natural forces were set in motion by the Gods, as were the forces which direct the life of an individual. Once either the man force or natural force was set in motion, each was entitled to seek their path to freedom. As water frozen in a tree may split that tree, so also may the individual be totally shaken by disruptive force.

Water

The Runes were consulted when information was desired to aid the questing process. A birth, a marriage, a victory celebration, a death, or a journey into battle were all important events when a runic casting would be called upon. Putting aside the problems of life by the physical act of casting the stones, the result would be a vision of the path for growth. To follow the path or to reject that path was left up to the individual.

As I use the runes in my present life, I am amused by the energy which surrounds them that states that they are "evil." After all, the symbol (SS) was used to represent Hitler's SS. I see much of this energy as coming from the 10th and 11th centuries when many religions were in competition with each other for converts. "My religion is more powerful than yours because it is bigger and better." Runes were condemned because they expected the individual to seek his own truth. Spiritual power was misunderstood to mean the power to control others. The Gods granted freedom to the individual and withdrew any direct control over what happened. The problem was not theirs.

The stones can be arranged in a meditation order. An example follows:

I am. I give myself spiritual freedom. I know my truth. I pull away from harm.

Joy

Growth in self love. Refusal to suffer while growing.

Each day I am reborn into freedom. My conflicts instruct me. I create my reality. I defend my space. My protection defines my space. I nourish myself. Joy urges growth. I harvest what I create. My inner light directs my path. I follow the path of the Spiritual Warrior. Growth is mine. I move along my path. The correction action flows into my awareness. Earth forces disrupt that which hinders. My life quest is celebrated. I enter the gateway to my truth. Change marks my path. My space is distinct. I commune with the God of my heart. Amen and again the cycle continues.

When a reading is performed the major energy level a person is working upon will be represented by a given symbol. Mixed with a bit of amusement a solution to a problem will become manifested on a conscious level. An answer, of course, is only as good as the question.

comprehension of astrology. AGS Software specializes in interpretive programs which can delineate and compare astrological data with reputable accuracy. Sex-o-Scope, Personal Numerology, and Daily Astro-Report are the most popular interpretive programs from AGS Software. AGS markets all of its programs directly; you can contact them at: AGS Software, P.O. Box 28, Orleans, MA 02653, (617) 255-0510. The price-range at AGS is between $25 and $300.

The greatest advantage to shopping at either Matrix Software or AGS Software is that their programs are made specifically for your own personal computer. All programs are compatible with IBM, Radio Shack (Tandy) Apple, Commodore, Kaypro, and Compac hardware.

Although astrology-specific computers have been popular in the past, they are clearly eclipsed by the facility of software for the home computer. Digicomp Corporation still produces its astrology-specific computer called the DR-70. This little wizard does nothing but astrology and does it with extreme accuracy. Numerous options make the DR-70 the "cadillac" of astrology-specific computers; depending on the accessories, the price on the DR-70 ranges between $2000-$3000. The only other such mass-marketed computer is the small hand-held Astro-Scope calculator which computes very few astrological specifics but does provide immediate information on simple chart comparisons. Astro-Scope usually retails for $20 and is available through Radio Shack.

If you are one of those special people who cannot afford to invest in your own personal computer, there are computerized astrology service centers which use large main-frame equipment to accurately calculate all of your charts and more. In this field the leaders are Astro Computing Services (P. O. box 16430, San Diego, CA 92116, (619) 297-9203) and Astro Numeric Services (P.O. Box 1040, El Cerrito, CA 94530, (415) 527-8414). These businesses will run charts and interpretive reports for as little as $5. Write in for their free catalogs.

In conclusion, I must comment on the impact of computers on the field of astrology. I can remember back in the early years of my career when clients would refuse to have any of their astrological information entered into a computer; they feared that the ancient system of symbols would be bastardized by the machines. Since those times, tremendous advances have been made in the computers; the latest programs have been written by knowledgeable professionals in the field. There is very little reason to doubt the great contribution which the computer has made to the interpretive skills of the astrologer. I predict that astrology from here on out will never be the same. The days of elitism in astrology are all over. No longer can the astrologer simply call on voices from the unknown to interpret the meaning of the symbols in the chart. Now we are bound to work hand-in-hand with the computer if we are to provide the public with the finest in astrological services.

If you have any further questions about astrology software or hardware, feel free to contact Robert Cole at Cole AStrological, P. O. Box 884561, San Francisco, CA 94188, (415) 558-8004. ☆

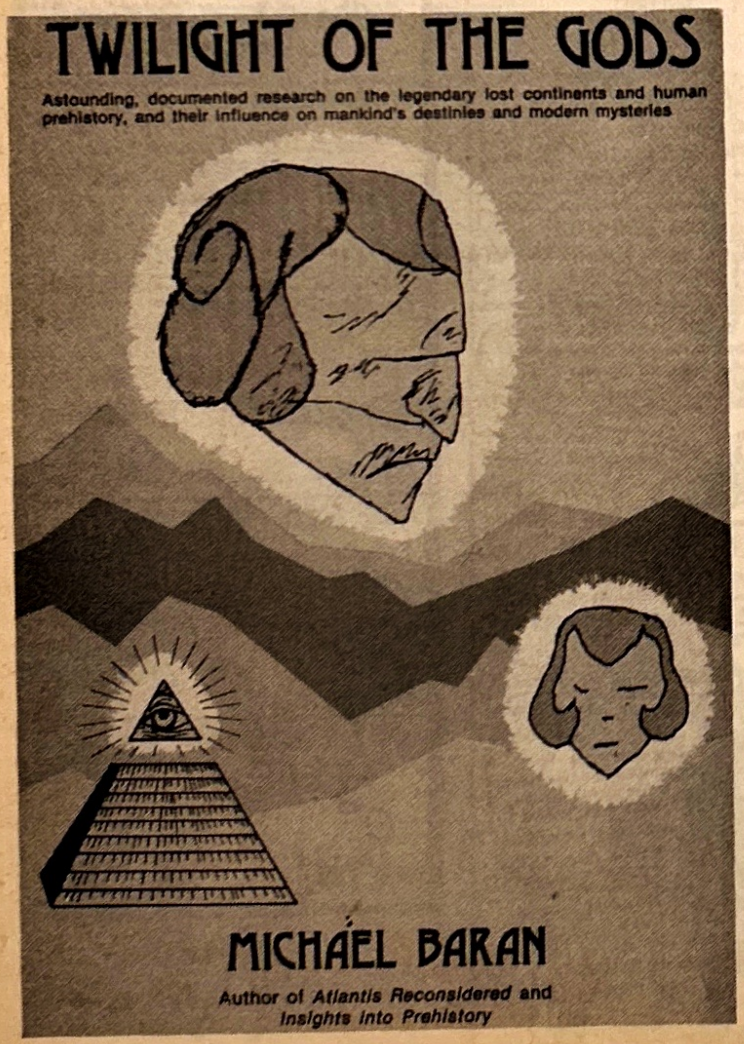
Book Review

Authors Helena Blavatsky, Ruth montgomery, Ignatius Donely and Immanuel Velikosky, with a little help from Edgar Cayce and Charles Berlitz, are the most off-cited sources listed in the bibliography of Michael Baran's third and latest book about Atlantis, Twilight of the Gods.

Using metaphysical texts as source material and scientific methods of covering all the bases with anything remotely applicable, Baran attempts to prove that the ancient Atlanteans used crystals and deep core electromagnetic energy of the planet to power machines, which caused their own destruction when the weakened upper crust of the planet caved-in.



TWILIGHT OF THE GODS
Astounding, documented research on the legendary lost continents and human prehistory, and their influence on mankind's destinies and modern mysteries
MICHAEL BARAN
Author of Atlantis Reconsidered and Insights into Prehistory

After reading some three or four pages I knew Baron was writing the Atlantis books in order to solicit funding for his own deep earth excavations. But I had to read the whole book to find out. I was right..."and that it should be done now by conscionably responsible individuals or an international group designed to guard against the kinds of abuses of our globe's inner forces that appear to have led to occasional world catastrophes in ancient times."

Indeed, Baron postulates the polar regions of the earth as having a vast network of intermecine subterranean cavities with crystal control units located a couple of miles underground emitting powerful concentrated energy beams. Beams utilized by UFO's in such a way that "craft and occupants could become part of the beacon themselves and effectively become partial energy quanta."

Further along in the book, Baron plays with the ancient drawings found in the Sahara desert of what looks like distorted humanoids wearing space suits. He conjectures that possibly the UFO-naunts did not come from alien worlds, but were mutations from our own gotten from living too close to the deep core magnetic influences, a below the surface of the world.

What I enjoyed about " The Twilight of the Gods" was all the different cultural myths, religious and folk, that Baran employed to make his point.

What I did not enjoy was the man's personal sense of frustration emanating from the less poetic parts. Sometimes the frustration was raw and primal, more often it was coated with an aura of scholarly superiority, which is often the game in intellectual circles.

I believe this frustration, rather than stemming from a lack of funding for experiments, really stems from Baran's inability to fully credit himself for being psychic. He knows that there really is something infinitely valuable about the center of the planet... something that makes heavy things light...well, in conclusion, I will sit here and decide that there is a line connecting my body to the center of the earth (hello center of the earth!) and I will allow myself the experience of feeling that I am letting go of frustration I cannot solve.

Movie Review

The movie DUNE starts off with a lot of promise. The music is very good; the opening theme is moving and dramatic. But then, it was produced by Dino De Laurentis, the father of such grandiose extravaganzas as the 1980's remake of "King Kong" and "The Towering Inferno". De Laurentis made his reputation with almost overwhelming set designs and powerful action, and he remained true to form with DUNE.

DUNE tries to be an epic film and just doesn't make it. It is incoherent and very serious. (I heard someone say it would have made a good opera.) The film makers attempt to translate a 900 page novel into two and a half hours. Unfortuntely, it focuses so much on violent scenes that there's not much time for character development or presenting the more mystical aspects of the story.

In the first scene we're introduced to a sisterhood of mystics who work as "Truthsceers" for the emperor of the known universe. For centuries, these women have passed along their psychic abilities and information to their (always female) children. But one woman, in love with the Duke of Atreides (the good guys) willfully had a male child. This son, Paul, is The Hero who may be the Haddad Shad'rac, the Messiah who fulfills a centuries-old prophecy. He inherits his mother's abilities and expands them through trials, tribulations, and mind-altering drugs.

In this movie, as people become more psychically aware, they become more serious and menacing—they don't ever laugh. Members of the sisterhood are trained to use 'The Voice', a psychic tool used to control and program people. They also can kill with this fifth chakra grip. (Such a benign use of psychic abilities!)

People who eat a spice called melange expand their psychic abilities, particularly clairvoyance and precognition. This spice is found only on the planet Arrakis which, being one vast desert, is nicknamed Dune. The Atreides (the good guys) and the Harkonnen (the bad guys) fight over who is going to control this planet and spice production. (A devotee of the DUNE books confided to me that this spice is extremely addictive—a detail which is glossed over in the movie. The producers avoid raising the spectres of interplanetary drug wars and universal drug addiction.)

Dune literally tries to cover too much ground, flitting back and forth between four different planets. Voice over narration is used throughout to explain who characters are and why they behave as they do. It also provides a lot of confusing background material. I think voice overs are a clumsy way of keeping the audience informed, especially when the narration does not seem to jive with the images on the screen. "Paul and Chani's love grew," the narrator intones and we see a silhouette of the lovers superimposed over a fiery battle scene. These inconsistent images seemed to be a result of thoughtless editing rather than a statement about the nature of love.

The movie emphasizes psychic and physical violence. One brief scene of the Harkonnen (the villainous race) happily promoting disease and disfigurement would have been enough. But these scenes are shown again and again with elements specifically designed to hit you on a sympathy level. The fourth chakra, which is where your affinity with yourself is based, is where these bad guys each have a "heart plug" which looks like a bathtub stopper but keeps a more vital fluid than tub water from flowing out. The Harkonnen get a sexual thrill out of unplugging some hapless guy; ten heartbeats later he is gone. Not only are they cruel to sensitive members of their own planet and out to destroy their enemies, they are also cruel to animals (unforgivable). The Baron of Harkonnen, a very ugly, obese man gives a new definition to the meaning of "ungrounded". He floats about four feet off the floor when not reclining on a chair.

There are no benign characters in this movie. Paul, the hero, is intent on revenge and there are many references to holy wars and religious crusades. (I guess the Star Wars movies have brainwashed me; I kept waiting for a Yoda-like, wise creature to interject some comments on pacifism and the power of amusement.)

When I left the theatre, I was surprised to discover that I was bored. I wondered how I could be bored after so much stimuli—but then I realized that when I get uncomfortable enough, as spirit I leave my body and I go unconscious. And after I had depleted my popcorn supply, there was nothing left but to fall asleep or be bored.

During the movie, whenever Paul is in pain or fearful, he recites some of his mother's teaching to himself, programming himself to stay neutral. "I must not fear. Fear is the mindkiller... I will face my fear. I will permit it to pass over and through me. And when it has gone past I will turn the inner eye to see its path. Where the fear has gone there will be nothing. Only I will remain..."

I should have listened to that message and stayed neutral in the middle of my head. DUNE helped me realize how much I resist graphic violence. And since that was the major theme of the movie, I think I'd rather read book.

Lewis Speaks

by Rev. Lewis S. Bostwick

In the Future: Women Are Better With Computers

Hello! I've always had a theory: one of the first things that civilized men (especially young men) was the horse and the saddle; next was cars. Those two things taught men how to work, (because they couldn't steal horses and they had to drive on the right side of the road or they'd get killed). We have a real horrible thing happening now called computers: young men are now going to have to learn to write and use multi-dimensional thinking. Computers may be the third thing to civilize man. This will be O.K. (until they discover that the ladies have better geometrical minds. I see in the future that the computer is causing an upgrading of the ladies on this planet to a new status which will allow their full abilities to express themselves. They will be using their mental image perfect pictures that will give them the ability to create on the screen the same level of perfection used in making perfect babies.)

When I look on a clairvoyant level into the space of one's head, there is an analyzer, picture making machine and storage disks which look like tremendous floppy disks. On the individual cells of the memory banks, there are 200 million years of history. This history record is what makes such a tremendous game of spirits taking bodies and why we as beings lose our space to bodies. You get to improve your record or repeat history every time you reincarnate. However, there can be some very unfortunate happenings to a body that allows this information on the cells to break loose and become free wheeling so to speak. This breaking loose is sometimes caused by different types of drugs. It's like being able to take all the information out of a floppy disk and put it on the screen and propel ourselves into the middle of this information. Instead of building up a slow fantasy you are being fuel-injected into your fantasies which have been created and forgotten but never destroyed.

I see not too far in the future when we as psychics will be able to take the entity out of these fantasies, and to be able to erase the fantasies that are handed down on a genetic level from body to body. The erasing of the genetic fantasies and other beings in our fantasies will enhance two things which occupy the same space at the same time- spirit and body -and will put us in a position where the health and welfare of the body will be improved. The competition between two people or two nations will be able to be dissolved and maybe then the meek will inherit the earth. However, it's sure gonna take some strong mean guys to save all those atheists and good religious people. I can't go on, I'm in such amusement. Sometimes, the smallest things are great to think about. Have a good day.☆

Speculating on Apples

Lewis Bostwick executive director of Psychic Life Magazine and a director of Deja Vu Publishing Co., ordered the purchase of an Apple II plus in 1980 to use it with a typesetting program -word processor- for publishing Psychic Life Magazine. There were no adequate programs available for inputting, formating pica columns, word or line counts or editing. No spelling checker program was heard of and the local Apple sales persons and managers did not know how to work the existing word processing programs. Undismayed, Bostwick went forward, promising to purchase 10 more. (If only he had bought Apple shares as well.) He has stocked the Church of Divine Man, of which he is founder, with Apples and installed two hard disk systems, one for accounting and one for purchasing. The Deja Vu Publishing Co. computer room has 3 Apple II pluses, dot matrix printers and a Diablo printer. He has ordered 19 Apples in five years, all in operation today. "I learned one lesson", he says of buying computers, "don't change horses in midstream." The only computers he buys are Apple and it has worked.

How to Pray

by Rev. Karen Tamura

Space Invaders Can Cause Body Pain

What does it feel like to have a being or a spirit climb into your space?

What does it feel like when someone else prays for you. The prayers are meant for God but how much of the energy, mental image concepts, and attention are focused on you? How does your body feel with all that attention?

I was sitting with a group of 35 or so people listening to a debate on Nicaragua. This group was a capable intellectual group of people. They represented at least 15 different kinds of religious or spiritual beliefs.

As I was listening to the debate I started to feel a pressure growing around my head and ears. It was like static, like being around neon lights. I yawned; that released some of the pressure. I looked around me. Everyone was listening intently and enjoying themselves. It was a lively debate, and everyone was doing their best to stay out of competition. The pressure started to get stronger and I decided to look at what was happening on a psychic energy level.

I saw at least two or three spirits or beings vying for each person's attention; there were family and friends but more than that, each person had beings that were acting as guardian angels; spirits each person had prayed for to protect and guide them spiritually.

After this meeting I started to watch many different people and the spirits protecting and guarding them. When different people came together in a group, the same pressure and buzzing, static energy would start around my head and ears.

At a meeting some days later with a different group of people I noticed the same kind of spirits. I saw the static energy was created by these spirits that were in competition. A spirit in competition! Why could that be? They didn't even have a body to worry about! No food, clothes, money, jobs or kids to worry about!

They were in competition with all the other spirits out there who want a part of our awareness, our energy, our creative abilities and the exciting position of having a body and being able to play on this planet. They wanted a piece of the action! They were like back seat drivers who always know the better way to get somewhere. These protective guardian spirits were in competition with one another!

I looked to see what kind of pictures or mental image concepts were being created out of this competition and I discovered some tremendous answers for myself:

What do spirits do to convince you not only that they can stay but that they know what's better for you than you know yourself? How do they convince us? One of the pictures that they try to use to convince us is the most startling of them all---they try to tell us that there is no such thing as spirit. Of course! If there is no such thing as spirit or better yet - if you are atheist, you will never kick them out! They don't exist! Those strange thoughts are something you ate that didn't agree with you. I don't exist, therefore I can stay.

These beings like to maintain the status quo, like a wagon that is full of people on a hay ride, the wagon hits a big pot hole; spirits get knocked out of your space and awareness as you go through spiritual and emotional growth. These spirits would rather have you stay at home and watch TV.

Another sign I noticed is when a person gets 'too busy' and is too busy for himself. Did you ever have a day when you "couldn't stop?" Even if you have a few minutes to relax in the middle of a busy hectic day you use it to complete busy work instead of stopping, stretching, taking a deep breath, saying hello to yourself. And instead of finding your amusement and enjoyment?

When you can no longer say hello to yourself and find the awareness and freedom of your own spiritual communication, then someone is controlling you. A spirit is keeping you too busy to say hello to yourself because it wants to maintain the status quo.

These controlling spirits also enjoy serious energy. The more serious you are the better. When you are serious about something, that thing becomes "senior" to you. (Being senior means that thing, thought, person, or situation is more important to you, than you are to yourself.)

One of the best ways out of this situation is prayer! or getting back your own ability to communicate as a spirit with other spirits. As long as you don't use serious energy to create your prayer space! (try enjoyment, enthusiasm, or amusement!)

Say hello to yourself as a spirit and in amusement say hello to those spirits around you! ☆

What Color Is Your Aura Today?

ADVERTISEMENT

First layer is orange pink. You are in a very personal communication with your body, as though you are making up after a long misunderstanding.
The second layer is green and yellow. You are taking a large step up in your personal growth. I see some difficulty letting go of some old energy to see your new found havingness.
The third layer is midnite purple. You are doing a lot of work on yourself in your dreams, and this may cause you to want to sleep alot and wake up groggy.
The forth layer is a strong orange. You have been cleaning out your communication with the God of your heart.
The fifth layer is red pink. There is lots of information you've been gathering and are now sorting what's for you and what's not.
Lavender is in the sixth layer. This is a very clear space of seeing. I see you taking a step out of that game of effort.
The seventh layer is pink and reflects alot of the first layer in that it looks personal to you with some DO NOT ENTER, NOT SHARING RIGHT NOW, signs — kind of tender but strong and certain.

Maybe it's time you had a reading. For an appointment call (415) 548-8020. Learn to use your own abilities - we have beginning classes and workshops, as well as a one year seminary training. Psychic Abilities Demo - Tuesdays, 2-5, Berkeley.

Gail Bowman sent us this photo taken at Yosemite National Park. She was pretending to be a queen when the photo was taken, and she reports seeing a flash just as the camera clicked. She mentioned it to the photographer who didn't see anything. Imagine her surprize when that flash came out on the print. The following a clairvoyant reading of this photo:

"A being (who often accompanies Gail) joins in her game of pretend. This is actually a repetition of the game they have been playing since Gail was a thirteen year old princess in the Babylonian court of Nebuchadnezzar. Gail forms a triangle of energy with her upper body and hands. The being comes straight down through her right hand to create a 'staff' of power".

- Clairvoyant reading by Marjory Horton

Do you have any of your own spirit photos you would like to share with us? We will publish reader's photos as space permits. Please include any information available about the photo, i.e. circumstances surrounding the picture, what you saw, type camera and film. All photos will be returned if mailed with a SASE. Mail to: Psychic Life, 1339 Lincoln Ave., San Rafael, CA 94901.
